

Stone Avenue walking tour 6

Traveling North from the heart of downtown, unique art has been integrated into varied public spaces along Stone Avenue.

26 - Freedom John Acorn

"Freedom" was originally designed in the early 1960s for the entrance to the Greenville County Museum of Art when it was located at the Gassaway Mansion. The art piece now resides at the corner of Main Street and Stone Avenue. Fabricated of welded brass and bronze, sculptor John Acorn created a nature-based theme to his art. The trunk, roots and branches are all visible in the finished product. Acorn taught sculpture art at Clemson University for 30 years.

27 - Aria Michael Neil Jacobsen

The bright yellow sculpture resembling a skein of tumbled ribbon sits on the corner of Stone Avenue and Elizabeth Street. The steel sculpture was created by Michael Neil Jacobsen and sponsored by the Greenville Arts in Public Places Commission. The title refers to the opera term "aria," an accompanied elaborate melody sung by a single voice.
